Background and Summary:

As we move into the next phase of reentry, considering offering an online option to parents that meets student needs and has the quality we would expect could be a challenge. Over the past year teachers have been required to provide instruction to both online and face to face students which is extremely difficult. We have two options here: offer online sections of basic courses that are available to students who meet a specific criteria or use a process established by NMPED in which courses are provided by established online programs with the student remaining enrolled with GISD.

Recommendation:

Use the NMPED process to provide online courses paid by federal funds which allows instructional staff to focus on quality face to face instruction as described in the New Mexico Roadmap to Accelerated Learning and Renewal.
